

Student Bill of Rights

YORK COLLEGE COLLABORATIVE LEARNING CENTER

WHAT STUDENTS CAN EXPECT FROM A TUTORING SESSION

- One-on-one attention
- Directed, focused help
- Know how to do at least one thing better at the end of a tutoring session than you could do when you came in
- Respectful and courteous consultation
- Someone to listen to you and your ideas
- Help with reading, writing, critical thinking skills and understanding complex concepts and principles
- Assistance with finding and using resources (e.g. library resources, anatomical models, grammar handbooks etc).

WHAT STUDENTS SHOULDN'T EXPECT FROM A TUTORING SESSION

- That your consultant will tell you the grade your assignment will, or should, receive. Only your instructor can make comments about grading
- Correcting or editing of your work—your consultant will not “fix” your paper or complete your assignment. All work that needs to be done on a paper or assignment will be done by you
- Complete transformation of a piece of writing or complete understanding of complex concepts and principles after one tutoring session
- Help with homework and take-home exams. NO EXCEPTIONS

WHAT CONSULTANTS CAN EXPECT OF A STUDENT

- Evidence you will be doing your own work
- A respectful and courteous interaction
- You've come to your session prepared to work and with the materials you need (i.e. outline, paper draft, assignment, source text, instructor's feedback).

Lateness policy: Appointments are available in 30- and 50-minute sessions. If you are more than 5 minutes late for a 30-minute session, the session will be marked as missed and cancelled. If you are more than 10 minutes late for a 50-minute session, the session will be marked as missed and cancelled. In the event that the CLC cancels your session, you will immediately be notified via email.

If either students or tutors believe that the expectations outlined in this document are not being fulfilled, please see the Collaborative Learning Center Manager or the Resource Center Specialist.
